GEP RELEASES ITS 2021 SUPPLY CHAIN & PROCUREMENT OUTLOOK REPORT, PROVIDING GLOBAL ENTERPRISES WITH THE NEW PLAYBOOK TO BUILD RESILIENCE, FLEXIBILITY AND SUSTAINABLE COMPETITIVE ADVANTAGE

- Much-anticipated report synthesizes the key lessons from 2020, highlights the top trends in business and technology and reveals their implications
- Details the eight essential new strategies for procurement and supply chain leaders to increase profitability

2020 threw out the rule book for global enterprises with complex global supply chains and procurement functions. GEP’s 2021 Outlook — the latest in the well-regarded series issued annually — synthesizes the priorities that will dominate the boardroom this year and beyond, and provides the new playbook for procurement and supply chain leaders to navigate uncertainty, mitigate risk, optimize costs and drive growth after the extraordinary shock of last year.
“GEP’s 2021 Outlook Report examines why supply chains bent and frequently broke in 2020 in the face of wild swings in consumer demand, trade wars, tariffs, increasing environmental devastation, social inequality and lockdowns,” explained John Piatek, GEP’s vice president, consulting, consumer goods and retail, and chairman of the firm’s Thought Leadership Council. “This report provides companies with a new playbook to come to grips with a post-pandemic cost structure and supply chain uncertainty.”

Included in the report:

- New Playbook — The eight essential strategies to build supply chain resilience, navigate uncertainty and create procurement advantage as a competitive differentiator

- Global Business Trends — Tangible lessons from 2020, the major changes in political and economic policies and their implications for enterprise leadership teams going forward

- Technology and Operations Disruptors — Proven technologies transforming and automating supply chains, and unifying finance and procurement under one model

The report was collaboratively authored by members of the GEP Thought Leadership Council, a global team of industry and thought leaders encompassing business and operations strategists, technology experts and innovators, and industry and commodity specialists.
